Barnes Produces Evidence to Prove Publication of Alleged Defamatory Statement

By Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 20.—Attorneys for William Barnes in his suit for $50,000 libel damages against Theodore Roosevelt rested their case late Saturday after they had offered evidence intended to prove publication of the alleged libelous statement uttered against the former chairman of the Republican state committee by the former President of the United States.

Mr. Barnes's counsel put only one witness on the stand. He was John McGrath, editor of a weekly private secretary. He testified that he gave out the statement complained of to newspaper people at a conference at which a number of persons were present, including the defendant, on the day the statement appeared with regard to the alleged interview between the parties. McGrath said he had written the statement himself and had given it to the press association representatives because he was "sick and tired of being misquoted." He said he had written the statement in the presence of Roosevelt, who had asked him to make it "as strong as possible." McGrath

J. MRCHANCE, MAN DROWNS

Falls Off Bridge Into Cheat River at Point Marion.

Channing J. McIntyre, 35, former [illegible] and chief of police at Daltonville, was drowned in the Cheat River at Point Marion early this morning. The body has not yet been recovered. Deceased is survived by a wife and seven children.

It is said that McIntyre, who was employed as night watchman at Daltonville, joined a party of Point Marion men in an automobile ride intending, it is said, to Uniontown. It is believed he missed the train and in wandering about the town fell from the county bridge into the river.

PENNSY LINES WEST ENTERS MARKET FOR EQUIPMENT

Will Place $16,000,000 Order in Addition to Big Contracts Pending, With Pennsylvania Company

The Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburg announced yesterday it was making inquiries for about $16,000,000 worth of new equipment. Inquiries for prices went out from the office of Vice President C. E. Fisk covering 6,000 freight cars, 60 locomotives and 50 all-steel passenger cars.

This plan has to do with that planned by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The announcement was made from Philadelphia Saturday that the latter company would purchase $50,000,000 worth of equipment.

The Pennsylvania Lines West have 40,000 freight cars in all. The company equipment is 5,000 new cars each year. Last year the company bought no new cars and this year purchased 1,000 more than usual to make up for last year's omission. All the equipment ordered by the Pennsylvania Lines will be for replacement and not to extend the equipment.

Counting the equipment ordered by the Pennsylvania Lines East of Pittsburg and the Pennsylvania System West, it is said, $50,000,000 will be spent for equipment in building 10,000 freight cars, 1,000 locomotives and 150 all-steel passenger coaches, an approximated total of $100,000,000.

BILL PASSES HOUSE

It Takes Away Service Commission's Powers Over Municipalities

By Associated Press

HARRISBURG, April 20.—The Vicherman bill was passed finally in the House today. It takes away from the Public Service Commission jurisdiction over contracts between municipal corporations and public service companies. It was argued on the floor of the House that if the bill passed the commission would have jurisdiction over nothing, but street railroad, telephone and telegraph companies.

In the Senate Senator Burke introduced a measure forbidding railroads from operating trains more than half a mile long under penalty of from $100 to $500 fine for each offense.

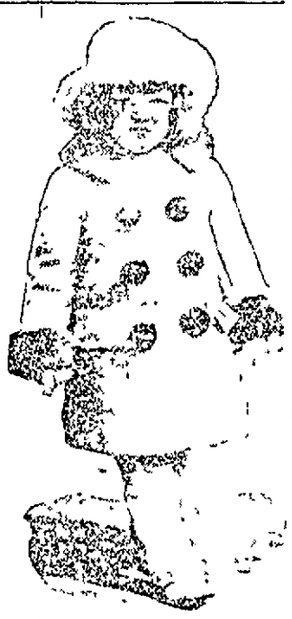
The Catlin bill to provide for the safety and health of persons employed in and about the anthracite coal mines passed third reading in the Senate after it had been amended to make the owner or operator of the mine the responsible party in case of accident to fix responsibility under the workmen's compensation law.

Sore Throat or Mouth.

You must keep the throat and mouth lean and healthy. Any disease that attacks the canal through which must pass the food we eat, the beverages we drink and the very air we breathe is a serious matter. Why neglect Sore Throat or Sore Mouth when TONSILINE makes it so easy for you to get relief? TONSILINE is the remedy specially prepared for that purpose. TONSILINE does its full duty—you can depend upon it. Keep a bottle in the house—where you can get it quick when needed. 25c and 50c. Hospital Size $1.00. All Druggists.

For the Children

Little John Jacob Astor Is a Sturdy Youngster



© 1915 by American Press Association

Among the children of the rich who may be seen almost any pleasant day playing in Central park, New York city, none attracts more attention than little John Jacob Astor. When he goes on his rambles he is accompanied by a corps of nurses to guide his first steps and guard him from harm. Baby Astor is now just a month past two and a half years of age and in the photograph is a sturdy and handsome youngster. His father, Colonel John Jacob Astor, was lost on the ill fated Titanic which went down on April 14, 1912. His mother, formerly Miss Madeleine Force, was rescued. Mrs. Astor, who devotes much of her time to the care of her child, is an advocate of the open air treatment of children and so Baby John has grown lusty and healthy. In the summer he spends his days at Bar Harbor, Me. He will have a great many millions of dollars when he grows up.

Pussy Come Walk.

This game, which is sometimes called invisible cats, is one of the numerous amusements in which a particular player has to be guided by the acuteness and accuracy of the sense of hearing. One player is blindfolded and seated in a chair in the middle of the room. At a call from him of "Pussy, come, walk," each of the company passes before him in turn. When the walker reaches the chair he utters a "Mew, mew" and the blindfolded player has to try to identify the speaker by his voice. Should he succeed the other takes his place; should he fail the signal is repeated and another comes forward. Players may, if they choose, disguise the voice in saying "mew," but it is difficult enough to recognize the natural voice, and to add to the difficulty retards the game and it is apt to grow tedious if played slowly.

THE QUICKEST WAY TO END CATARRH

Just One Safe Way to be Rid of Ailment

Catarrh is a local disease. To stop it for good you must get down to its real cause. The air is full of catarrhal germs which find entrance into the nasal passages and are breathed in by anyone and when the system fails to throw off these germs they find permanent lodgment in the mucous membrane of the nose, throat and head and [illegible] by millions.

The germs of catarrh live in the secretions and the inflamed tissues permanently healed by inhaling the fumes of the purely vegetable antiseptic disinfectant peroxmint. High efficiency. You breathe its medicated vapor into all the hidden folds of the nasal passages, the throat and other mucous membranes, in this way furnish with each breath complete treatment. This medical antiseptic also is certain death to the germs of catarrh and drives them out of your system, so when the germs are destroyed the catarrh with its obnoxious symptoms will stop. Just two or three minutes will give you blessed relief. With its use two or three times a day for a few weeks will drive catarrh and every symptom of catarrh completely out of your system. No catarrh sufferer can afford to another day go without trying this wonderful treatment. It is sold by druggists everywhere with a positive guarantee of entire satisfaction or money cheerfully refunded.—Adv.

Appropriate selections were rendered by the choir, which included Edward Kooken, Miss Wagner, Charles Sindersen and Ellis Wagner. Deceased participated in Interment in Hill Grove cemetery.

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Makes It Lifeless, Dull, Dry, Brittle and Thin.

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful glossy silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find too that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop and your hair will be silky, fluffy lustrous soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

WILL BENEFIT MANY SICK

Inter-State Doctors Free Offer Attracting Scores of Additional Patients.

The friends of the Inter-State Doctors in the state of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania can be counted by the thousands for the many remarkable testimonials given them have given undoubted proof of the value of their new scientific medical system. It is not the word of a single sufferer alone, but the constant stream of these testimonials that tells the story of success—success in the treatment of the patient—tremendous patronage given the Inter-State Doctors as their reward. So many testimonials are given the Inter-State Doctors that publishing them at the rate of one a day, they at nearly all times have sufficient testimonials to publish a new one from a patient each day for weeks, some times months ahead. They pick them from different sections of the country to show the work being done by them not only here but other cities as well. The truth of these cannot be questioned for many scores of these statements have been seen in these columns direct from Connellsville people—people whom other sick can call personally upon to investigate the truth of each testimonial.

A special offer is being made the sick by the Inter-State Doctors at their Connellsville Medical Institute, located at the corner of Pittsburg and Apple streets, over the Citizens National Bank, to all sick and ailing people who call upon them before April 29. The offer is: Consultation will be free, examination will be free and all treatments will be free. The only charge made being for bare cost of medicines and their distribution to those starting treatment. Consultation and examination will be free to all. Only curable cases will be accepted for treatment but it must not be forgotten that many cases deemed incurable under obsolete methods of treatment are readily benefited or cured under the new system of treatment.

The Inter-State Doctors treat practically all kinds of deep-seated and chronic diseases and ailments and the sick cannot do better than by consulting them at their earliest opportunity. Read the following:

McKeesport, Pa., Mar 16 1915

"I have suffered from severe pains on the left side of my chest and in the region of the heart for years which often [illegible] days weak. Would get so bad that I would leave me played out and feeling sore in the chest and lungs.

"Having heard of the many cures being made by the Inter-State Doctors of this city I decided to go to them, which was on the 8th of January. My improvement in these two months has been wonderful for I now have no more pains, the soreness has left me and I feel fine even after a day's hard work. I now do my work without after effects and feel comfortable and good.

"The result given me by the Inter-State Doctors makes me feel gratified and grateful and their statement should guide others who are ailing as I was to go to the Inter-State Doctors for help.

(Signed), Ernest Heidenfelder,
2304 Cronemeyer street."

Sick and ailing people who desire to take advantage of the extremely low cost of treatment during the free offer as mentioned above should call at the earliest opportunity but during the office hours of 9 A. M. to 12 noon, 1:30 to 5 P. M. and evenings, 7 to 8 daily. Sunday hours being only from 9 A. M. to 12 noon.—Adv.

WHO CAN DOUBT SWORN TESTIMONY OF HONEST CITIZENS?

Some time ago I began the use of Your Swamp-Root with the most remarkable results. For years I was almost a wreck and was a great sufferer. I was so bad at times I would faint away and had sinking spells. Finally a new doctor was called in and he said I had kidney trouble and gave me medicine, of which I took several bottles. I obtained some relief from this but I was getting weaker all the time. I could not sleep and suffered so much pain that my husband and children had to lift me in and out of bed. After this time two friends sent me word to try Swamp-Root, which I did, and I am glad to state that the first dose gave me relief. After taking the third dose I was helped into bed and slept half the night.

I took several bottles of Swamp-Root and I feel that I owe my life to this wonderful remedy. The two family doctors said I could not live three months. I would have to be helped in and out of bed 10 to 20 times every night. After taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root for two days I was entirely free from getting up and could sleep soundly.

MRS. D. E. HILLMAN,

Your Woodwork and Furniture Looks Like New When Treated With

Law-Re-lac

DOES your woodwork need refinishing? Is your furniture scratched? Have your floors been marred by constant tramping? If this is so, we have the remedy—LAW-RE-LAC. It's one of the most durable refinishers that we have ever sold. You simply put it on like ordinary paint, brush it out well, and the result is a glossy, hard finish that gives an appearance of complete newness to all your wordwork.

And you can put it on yourself—quickly too. Takes only 10 minutes to finish a chair—so you can estimate how quickly you can renew your whole house.

The surface it produces retains its gloss and can be washed and wiped frequently without injury.

You can reproduce any natural wood grain.

And all this at a very moderate cost.

Come in and let us show you samples of woodwork that has been refinished with LAW-RE-LAC—you'll be surprised what you can accomplish with it in your own home.

Learn to save heating dollars!

If you were getting 4% interest on your savings deposit and another bank offered you 10% to change your account, what would you do? Would you put it off? Certainly not! Why therefore do you cling to the reckless fuel wastes, the health risks, and the replacement bills of old fashioned heating devices, when you can begin at once to save far more than 10% in heating dollars by investing in a big dividend-paying outfit of

AMERICAN RADIATORS & IDEAL BOILERS

Each Spring and Fall, in the renting and buying seasons, the public is showing a fast increasing preference for buildings that are radiator heated, having learned from experience, or from neighbors use, that these ideal heating outfits do far more than any other material feature of the building to make it a genial, healthful, convenient, cleanly place in which to live and work. Besides, they are big-paying investments because of the many strong economies their use brings about. They unfailingly guarantee comfort—and at a minimum outlay. They earn their cost!

If all the people knew, after a year's trial, of the comforts, the lessened coal bills, doctor bills, repair bills, cleaning bills, and the saving in labor, fire protection, absence of blackening, rusting, storing, etc., no one would de willing to go back to old fashioned heating. Did you ever hear of anyone going back to other ways of heating once they tried our way? They will tell you their investment in IDEAL-AMERICAN outfit pays far higher than 10% in reducing the cost of living.

A No. 1-22-W IDEAL Boiler and 400 ft. of 38-in. AMERICAN Radiators costing the owner $190 were used to heat this cottage. At this price the goods can be bought of any reputable, competent Fitter. This did not include costs of labor, pipe, valves, freight, etc., which vary according to climatic and other conditions.

If you now own, or are about to buy or rent, you owe it to yourself to use that same shrewdness and foresightedness in planning, buying or leasing as taught by ablest Builders and Real Estate men everywhere; that is, put in an IDEAL-AMERICAN outfit now—at present most favorable prices—iron prices now rule lowest in 10 years past—and in these dull months you get the services of the most skilled Fitters. Don't be caught unprepared another Winter—investigate now.

The fire in an IDEAL Boiler need not be rekindled in an entire heating season. One charging of coal easily lasts through the longest zero night. They change a house into a home.

Here Is Good News for Stomach Victims

Some very remarkable results are being obtained by treating stomach, liver and intestinal troubles with pure vegetable oils, which exert a cleansing, soothing and purifying action upon the lower bowels, removing the obstructions of poisonous fecal matter and gases and preventing their absorption by the blood. This done, the food is allowed free passage from the stomach, fermentation ceases and stomach troubles quickly disappear.

George H. Mayr, for twenty years a leading Chicago druggist, cured himself and many of his friends of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles of years' standing by this treatment, and so successful was the remedy he devised that it has since been placed in the hands of druggists all over the country, who have sold thousands of bottles.

Though absolutely harmless, the effect of the medicine is sufficient to convince any one of its remarkable effectiveness, and within 24 hours the sufferer feels like a new person. Mayr's Wonderful Remedy is sold by leading druggists everywhere with the positive understanding that your money will be refunded without question or quibble if ONE bottle fails to give you absolute satisfaction.

How Croup Comes and What To Do For It

Croup usually comes at night. The child wakes with a harsh, croaking, choking cough and a struggle for breath. Immediate action to loosen the phlegm is necessary, as there is always the danger of suffocation and strangling. Goff's Cough Syrup acts at once; cuts the thick, hard mucus, opens the air passages and brings instant relief. It is a most reliable remedy for Whooping Cough and common colds and coughs. Every mother should have it in the house. Contains no opiates. Get a 25 or 50 cent bottle from your Grocer or Druggist now, and have it ready in the night.

TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 20, 1915.

THE GOVERNOR'S GAME.

This promises to be a busy week in legislative and executive circles at Harrisburg owing, chiefly to the intense desire of the Governor to make good certain campaign pledges which he made to the people on his own responsibility, and which he finds it difficult to redeem because of the fact that too many candidates for the Legislature made pledges of a similar character only different.

While protesting that his pledge to the people in the matter of Local Option legislation is sacred, the Governor does not seem to think it a moral offense for Legislators to break faith with their constituents on the same question. In this matter the Governor is to say the least somewhat inconsistent.

It is charged that the Governor is using his position to coerce members of the Legislature both as to voting for the Local Option Bill that he is holding for important appointments and approval of important measures as a club over the heads of some members and as a blue mute to others. In short that he is using all the powers of his great office and all the arts of an unscrupulous politician to force this bill through the House of Representatives in the face of the fact that no less than 130 votes are pledged against it.

The Governor has a perfect right to his individual and official attitude toward Local Option, and so has every other Republican in view of the fact that this question is no part of the Republican Platform but the opinion is common that the Governor is overstepping the bounds of propriety in trying, the means he does to boost the bill.

The Courier has refrained from expressing an opinion on Local Option itself but it has on this and other occasions expressed very positive views upon the independence of the three branches of government under our American system. In that connection it recalled President Wilson for the high minded manner in which he pressed his point upon the Congress. We have said that no political boss ever cracked the whip with greater vigor than the present occupant of the White House. Wilson has all of Jackson's stubbornness and much of his success.

Governor Brumbaugh is pursuing much the same plan in pushing his policies upon the Pennsylvania Legislature. He has not been content with recommending them. He has had his own bills prepared by his Attorney General and has peremptorily demanded that the bills be passed just as President Wilson demanded the passage of the Tariff, Currency and other measures coming before the Shipping bill which failed of passage in the House is ordained to be passed without debate. There was quite a great deal of debate, however, and the Shipping bill was not passed. Legislative independence finally revolted against Executive domination.

Governor Brumbaugh may be a good man who believes in the doctrine that it is proper to fight the devil with fire but his methods do not differ in the degree from those of the ordinary machine politician who is not above playing both ends against the middle. For example he has threatened that he will not commission on the Local Option bill repeaters and that he will single those who help him. This is an open bid for support for local option in return for Executive action on the Full Crew repeal. He has withheld the names of the Public Service Commissioners with the carefully concealed purpose of trading on them for support of the Local Option bill. This move met with a counterstroke yesterday when Senator Crow announced that the Commission bill before the Senate and could not be withdrawn without the consent of that body.

It is rather unfortunate that the Governor should have seen fit to make such an issue of the Local Option bill. The Governor is said to be upright and honest and with no antagonism to his ambition we doubt whether he is playing the game with wisdom and skill. However, it's his game.

FULL CREW REPEAL.

The Full Crew bill repealer passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 125 to 68 and its passage in the Senate is assured. It is a piece of legislation that should never have been put on the statute books of Pennsylvania. Without stopping to argue whether the extra trainman is needed in the interest of efficiency or safety it is sufficient to say that the question upon which it should be settled by the railroad managers and the trainmen it ought not to have required the action of the Legislature. The enactment of the Full Crew law was a prostitution of the supreme power of the Commonwealth to private interest. It is noteworthy in connection with this bill that the Republican state leaders were for the greater part committed against the repeal, but the demand for it was so strong and insistent that it could not be denied.

The Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg will spend ten millions in renewals and improvements, which means that the Pennsylvania railroad system will spend in all $50,000,000. That will help the coke trade some, and the coke trade will in turn help the Pennsylvania some. This is reciprocity, which is not only sound statesmanship but good business.

The 57th primary principle threatens to be generally applied.

If the bill to increase the limit of city and borough indebtedness from 7% to 10% becomes a law, perhaps it won't be necessary to boost Connellsville's valuation so high.

Governor Brumbaugh is a good man. We have no quarrel with him, but that does not prevent us from expressing our opinion of his unusual if not unconstitutional methods.

Looking Backward

News of The Past Condensed from the Files of The Courier.

FRIDAY, APRIL 17, 1885.

Lack of demand put the coke trade in a slump and shipments drop to 500 cars a day. Of the 19,871 ovens in the region there are 2,900 idle. Much coke is being stocked.

Commencement exercises of the class of 1885 are fixed for May 12 in Newmyer's Hall. The class is composed of Maggie Davis, May Johnson, Delia Turner, Bird Pugh, Emmet Collins, Earl McDaniel and W. D. Moore.

As a result of the wreck at Indian Creek in which Benjamin F. Fuller and Harry H. Fuller lost their lives, an investigation is ordered to determine whether or not the Baltimore & Ohio bridge, which collapsed, was defective. Two coroner's juries disagreed over the verdicts, part of each jury declaring his belief that the structure was unsafe.

New Haven unanimously votes to issue bonds for the erection of a new school house.

FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1905.

Detailed report of the coke trade for the week ending Saturday, April 15, shows a total of 23,281 ovens in the region, of which 21,28[illegible] are active and 1,9[illegible] are idle, with an estimated production of 2[illegible] tons.

Shipments for the week aggregate 11,100 tons, consigned to Pittsburg [illegible] cars to points west 7,100 cars, to points east 3,[illegible] cars.

The week proves to be a slow one in the coke trade, neither demand or price being satisfactory to operators.

Small operators are banking their ovens.

S. J. Lewis, assistant engineer for the United States Geological Survey, analyses the Youghiogheny river water and finds it nearly pure and much better for drinking than the water of surrounding towns.

Petitions

By GEORGE ETCH,
Author of "An Good Old Sweat."

A petition is a string of names brought around by a personal friend who is in a big hurry and "Sign here please."

After you have signed, there is no valid objection to your calling up the friend and asking him what it is all about. However, this is seldom done.

It indicates a want of confidence, and everything in this country, even crops, depends on confidence.

When the compiler of a petition has secured a list of names as long as a delinquent tax supplement, he takes it to some public official, presents it to him and says: "We the free and untrammeled voters of this district demand the following." And with the official sees the list of strong and implacable citizens who are willing to lay down their lives for their rights he covers in rapidly and says: "I submit to the will of the people. State your request."

The right of petition is guaranteed in all constitutions. There is scarcely a country so destitute of liberty as to forbid its citizens to prepare petitions and present them to authorities. In general, however, it has been found that when a body of petitioners possess the divine right of suffrage, the said petitions are much more terrifying.

Petitions in this country are now so powerful that few legislators presume to cast their votes upon great subjects without preparing a petition in advance from their constituents. It is indeed an imposing sight to witness an obedient servant of the people casting his vote against a bill because a majority of his constituents have petitioned him to do so, while his colleague is voting nobly for it in response to an almost unanimous demand from the same body of constituents.

"He goes it rapidly."

Petitions are very useful affairs, but the methods of signing them need considerable revision. Our constitutions should guarantee the right of every freeborn citizen to read all petitions presented them and to refuse to sign them. Some in fact, had times, without being considered liberalized to exercise so long as the man who refuses to sign all petitions is regarded as unfriendly as the man who insists on buying his own drinks we must expect a good deal of confusion in the mind of the faithful but timid public servant.

FULL CREW REPEAL BILL PASSES THE HOUSE, 135 TO 68

Horton Only Fayette Member to Support the Measure.

LOCAL OPTION MOVES AHEAD

Passes Second Reading After Efforts to Amend It Are Defeated; Legislators Standing Out for Clear-Cut Light at Final Vote Wednesday.

HARRISBURG, April 20.—The House last night by a vote of 135 to 68 passed the bill to repeal the Railroad "full crew" law. It is expected the Senate will put the bill through.

The bill was debated for two hours, but the fate of the measure was known before the House met. It was found that Philadelphia had lined up solidly for the railroads and a large majority of the Allegenians had taken the same position.

The members from Fayette county, the home of Senator W. E. Crow, chairman of the Republican state committee, divided three against the bill and one for it. D. Harry Horton voted for the repeal, and Sinclair, Lynch and Smith against it.

The Local Option bill passed second reading in the House last night without a roll call. It will come up at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning on final passage without either side previously having shown their strength.

R. F. Hopwood of McKean, tried to break the gentlemen's agreement entered into by the "dries" and "wets" that no fight be made on second reading, but the steam roller was run over him, both friends and foes of the legislation joining in the operation of the machine.

Mr. Hopwood proposed an amendment changing the unit from counties to townships, boroughs and cities. He spoke for it. Charles J. Rowen of Philadelphia, who announced he was going to vote against the governor's license bill, said it was unfair to consider this amendment. It pointed out the wonderful sentiment of the state, either for or against the measure is based on the court decisions and it is unfair to let this bill go by this amendment. Rowen said both sides favored a fair proposed change of law and how the real test to come. We force it, which the bill will be on third reading.

George McWilliams, sponsor of the bill, asked for third reading of the amendment and the carrying out of the gentlemen's agreement. Hopwood and two others were heard to vote for the amendment, while the other 201 representatives cried "no." The bill then passed second reading without objection.

Governor Brumbaugh again declared that he expected the bill to pass Wednesday.

Among bills passed finally by the Senate were the following.

Providing for accommodation in the Armory County Soldiers & Sailors' Memorial Home for veterans of the war with Spain, Philippine insurrection and China relief expedition.

House bill authorizing counties and municipalities to unite in providing rest rooms in the court house.

Providing for taxing the owners and harboring of dogs in first class townships and for destroying dogs.

While House bill authorizing county commissioners to appropriate money for maintenance of such indigent residents of the county as may be patients in a sanatorium or hospital of any kind in the county which has been used and equipped according to state Health Department plans.

House bill providing for a commission of three civil and civil the Department of Agriculture.

Appropriating $5,000,000 to the Highway department for maintenance of highways, purchase of turnpikes, construction of state aid roads and other purposes.

No one other than the House passed the following.

Amending the acts relating to collateral inheritance taxes so that registers of wills shall name attorneys and employ clerks.

Increasing salaries of commissioners in counties having between 125,000 and 150,000 population from $1,800 to $4,000 annually.

Authorizing state commissioner of health to establish a detention camp for leprosy on a state forest reserve.

Designating insurance commissioner as official upon whom to serve legal processes for foreign insurance companies doing business in Pennsylvania.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a terrible irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and kill the germs that cause dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.—Adv.

Heal your skin with Resinol

NO matter how long you have been tortured and disfigured by eczema, burning, raw or scaly skin humors just put a little of that soothing, antiseptic Resinol Ointment on the sores and the suffering stops right there. Healing begins that very minute, and in almost every case your skin gets well quickly, easily and at little cost.

Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by all druggists. Dissolve for eczema.

A Woman Doctor.

says, "Longevity is a necessary factor in the future of the race. The average American girl is built for motherhood." This may be true, but if weak and ailing girls passing from girlhood to womanhood would only rely as thousands do upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—that simple remedy made from roots and herbs—to restore the system to a normal healthy condition, it would cause many ills from which they suffer to disappear so that motherhood might become the joy of their lives.—Adv.

SICK CHILDREN LOVE CASCARETS FOR THE BOWELS

Give "Candy Cathartic" for a Bad Cold, Sour Stomach, Constipation.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most of the ills of childhood are caused by a sour, disordered stomach, sluggish liver and constipated bowels. They catch cold easily, become cross, fretful, irritable, feverish, restless, can't sleep well and need a gentle cleansing of the bowels—but don't try to force a nauseating dose of oil into the little one's already sick stomach—it is cruel, needless and old-fashioned.

Any child will gladly take Cascarets Candy Cathartic which act gently—never gripe or produce the slightest uncomfortableness—though change the little one's system, sweeten the stomach and bowels in a pure healthy condition.

Full directions for children and grown-ups in each package.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this gentle, thorough laxative which cost only 10 cents a box at any drug store.—Adv.

A RUSSET.

Dempsey Pyle the well known barber who for years past has hurried to be the first man in town sporting a straw hat each spring, was seen going along with his straw pile on Monday afternoon. Someone remarked, "Well, Dempsey is out with the first straw hat." "Oh, no," said a wiser one, "that's the second time. He was out with the straw hat the first warm day." Alex Lowe, for some reason, seems to have lagged behind a little this season to get a straw roof on.

SPUD GROWING.

L. L. Hough came to town on Monday bringing in a couple of sacks of Carman No. 3 seed potatoes. People wanted to buy them but he waved all aside. The "spuds" were for Edward Workman, the Hawkeye gardener. And Mr. Hough said that he has no more for sale. On being asked how many potatoes he is planting this year, Mr. Hough answered calmly, "Ten acres." Farmer Hough comes from the Reagantown neighborhood which is just the little "spud" growing community of this section. They grow potatoes out in that region with the utmost abandon. Carmen No. 3 is the favorite seed. But Irish robbers are roaming around and making a good deal of fuss to get in the front ranks of demand. The growers out there say they are not knowing the great starch producing potatoes which are not so tasty when served with jackets on, mashed, fried or in any other way the thrifty and skillful housewife has of putting out the potatoes for home consumption. And speaking once more of seed potatoes the stores were very slow this year in getting the seed-stuff. Last week when a lot of people were getting agitated about dropping some potatoes into the furrow, a canvass of the town showed not a seed potato. They are on deck now, however.

Mosquitoes

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D., LL. D., Commissioner of Health.

Mosquitoes born now not only live all summer, but each female lays according to the species about 150 eggs. These multiplied by the generations of a season would add up to millions of mosquitoes. As their breeding season has begun we must be diligent in our efforts to destroy their breeding places. Should we fail in our efforts we will be annoyed by their buzzing and their biting and by an increase of malaria fever and should yellow fever be introduced to our shores, it would make for a serious epidemic.

The battle must begin at once. If we have to use rain barrels for our water supply, they should be carefully netted so that the mosquito cannot reach the water and lay its eggs. If fresh pools exist about our places they should be filled up or drains should be laid carrying away the rain water and not permit it to collect and become stagnant. If our swamps are too large to drain and fill up, they should be treated with petroleum so that the oil will prevent the larva of the mosquito from reaching the atmosphere to breed. It will then drown for the want of oxygen.

In country places ducks, particularly mallards, will do much to keep down mosquito pests, as they are very fond of the larva and pupa.

Tomato cans, sardine boxes, broken cups—any vessel that will hold the rain water will afford favorable breeding places for mosquitoes. One tomato can half full of water will be sufficient for the rearing of thousands of mosquitoes.

The saucers under the flower pots in and around our houses offer favorable breeding places. Water vessels that are set out for birds and animals are often found full of mosquito larvæ. Therefore, such receptacles ought to have the water changed daily so as to destroy any eggs that may be laid in them. Water pitchers in rooms that are only occasionally used have often been found fertile breeding places and where houses were well screened they were filled with mosquitoes owing to the fact that maybe one or two female mosquitoes had found access to the water in these pitchers of a spare chamber.

KOPPERS INSTALL MODEL PLANT FOR MARYLAND STEEL

120 By-Product Ovens Supply Coke Needs of Big Company.

BALTIMORE BUYS THE GAS

Plant So Designed That It May be Enlarged If Occasion Demands; It Supplants Original Installation of United Otto Ovens; Built in 1903.

An interesting description of the model by-product coking plant of the Maryland Steel Company at Sparrows Point, Md., is given below. The story originally appeared in the Iron Trade Review. It describes the plant in the following manner.

For the past twelve years the Maryland Steel Company has been operating by-product coke ovens at Sparrows Point, Md., on a large scale. It has produced coke suitable for use in its blast furnaces and supplied the surplus coke oven gas as an illuminating gas for consumption in Baltimore, connected to the plant by a pipe line 12 miles long. Last year a new coke oven plant was put in operation, displacing the initial installation made in 1903. The latter comprised 200 United Otto ovens, arranged in four batteries of 50 each, each oven having a capacity of 2 net tons of coal. The new plant comprises 120 Koppers ovens arranged in two batteries, each oven of 13¼ net tons coal capacity, both of the new batteries carbonize on 18 hour coking time, so that there is a daily capacity of 2,100 tons of coal, yielding about 1,500 tons of blast furnace coke.

The pioneer installation had a long successful operation, but through wear and tear the usefulness of the plant gradually diminished until it was decided that it was no longer an economic proposition to attempt to maintain it. Before definitely deciding on the type of oven for the new equipment, the Maryland Steel Company contracted with the H. Koppers Company for an experimental plant consisting of six ovens of 15 tons capacity each. Construction of the experimental plant was begun about November, 1912, but before this battery was started the Maryland Steel Company closed in May, 1913, with the Koppers Company for the present plant of 120 ovens. As in the original plant, the gas from the ovens is divided into a rich and a lean portion, the former before being sent to Baltimore being enriched with benzol obtained from the leaner gas, as stated. The plant also provides for the recovery of tar and the Koppers process of manufacture of ammonium sulphate, and in the usual way the lean gas is used as a source of heat in the ovens themselves.

Ground was broken in May, 1912, and construction was completed in July, 1913, when one battery of 60 ovens was put into operation. The ovens are located near the shore line in close proximity to the three blast furnaces. The new work designed and installed by the Koppers Company starts with a belt conveyor for the crushed coal and includes a new coal bin, the ovens and apparatus and appliances belonging to the oven plant, and a belt coke conveyor discharging the coke into the blast furnace coke bin. The complete plant, including the original coal storage yard and coal handling and coal crushing equipment, the by-product recovery plant, coke screening station and tracks tributary to the oven plant, occupies an area of about 15 acres. The plant is designed so that two additional batteries of 60 ovens each can be installed to the eastward in line with the present batteries. The by-product plant parallels the batteries to the south, and is laid out so that additional by-product apparatus for future batteries may be installed in an extension of the first building without interfering with the operation of the existing plant.

One of the features of the plant is that the coke is delivered from the screening station to the coke bin at the blast furnace trestle directly by means of a belt conveyor.

Coal arriving at the plant by rail may be used immediately or stored and subsequently reclaimed by a revolving coal bridge of 280 feet span, pivoted at one end and located at the extreme west end of the plant. A mixture of coal containing 28 to 29 per cent volatile matter is used. The coal is crushed in the coal crushing plant installed for the original ovens. When it leaves the building it is of such fineness that about 75 per cent will pass through a ⅛ inch mesh sieve.

Each battery of ovens comprises a space of about 235 feet in length and 40 feet in width, exclusive of pusher foundations. The oven chambers are 18½ inches wide at the pusher end and 21 inches at the coke end. They are about 10 feet high and 37 feet long between doors. The gas offtakes are arranged on the pusher side. The regenerators are located below the oven chambers, each oven having its individual regenerator, so that any number of individual ovens can be shut down without affecting the regulation of the ovens remaining in operation.

About 5,800 cubic feet of rich gas per ton of coal carbonized, having an average heating value of about 620 B. t. u., is delivered to Baltimore, and about 4,450 cubic feet of lean gas of about 190 B. t. u. is used for coking, so that of the total quantity of 10,250 cubic feet of gas per ton of coal, only a little over 43 per cent is used for coal carbonization, while nearly 57 per cent is surplus gas. Reduced to the B. t. u. basis, are requirements for coking are only 38 per cent, while 62 per cent of the total heat value of the gas is available for outside purposes. At the present time with only one battery in operation the total surplus gas is furnished to Baltimore.

Provision is made, however, for future use of portion of the surplus gas in the steel plant. To this end a gas by-pass is installed between the rich gas and lean gas mains after the final coolers. This by-pass is equipped with a gas seal to permit travel of the gas only in one direction, so that rich gas may flow into the lean gas mains while it is impossible for lean gas to find its way back into the rich gas main. This feature serves to provide for an automatic adjustment of the quantity of rich gas furnished to Baltimore according to the demand. Since the by-pass is located between the final coolers and benzol washers, the benzol is extracted also from such portions of the rich gas which, owing to reduced demand on the part of the city, enter the lean gas system through the gas seal.

ROCKWOOD.

ROCKWOOD, April 19.—J. E. Johnson, baggage master on the Somerset & Cambria branch, has moved his family and household goods to Rockwood, where he occupies the Peter Snyder property on East Broadway, formerly occupied by J. A. Kirkpatrick.

Mrs. William Zufall and daughter Alta, expect in a short time to leave for the states of Kansas and Washington, where they will spend several weeks this summer visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Bittner spent Sunday as the guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Bittner of Glencoe.

C. E. Statler is seriously ill at his home on Main street, suffering from a severe attack of fever.

R. G. Shumaker opened his new restaurant in the Weimer building on Main street Saturday evening, at which time he gave a souvenir to each customer.

R. D. McClellan of Garrett, motored to Rockwood Sunday, where he spent the day with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. A. McClellan.

Miss Leah Mitchell has returned to her home at Confluence, after a very pleasant visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Bartholomew of Market street.

Hillory Coughenour of Somerset, spent several days recently the guest of relatives and friends here.

D. S Holton, who is employed with the Western Union at Fairmont, W. Va., spent Sunday with his family at Rockwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Bowman, will leave soon for a visit of several weeks with relatives at Connellsville.

Mrs. E. G. Tressler of Cumberland, spent Friday of last week in Rockwood on business. The Tressler family expect to move to Rockwood in the near future.

DON'T WASH YOUR HAIR WITH SOAP

When you wash your hair, don't use soap. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

At the Theatres.

McINTYRE AND HEATH.

The Soisson

McINTYRE AND HEATH.

McIntyre and Heath, whose fame as delineators of quaint negro characters is predominant, will be the attraction at the Soisson Theatre tonight in an elaborate revival of George V. Hobart and Joan Schwartz musical comedy, "The Ham Tree," under the management of John Cort. "The Ham Tree" is a play of laughter and song and dance, and in its revised and up-to-date form will disclose much that is new and novel. James McIntyre as the doleful Alexander Humbletonian, who leaves his job as a attendant in a livery stable for fame as a footlight favorite, and Tom Heath as the hopeful minstrel, Henry Jones, who has visions of hams growing on trees, rivers of beer, swamps of schnitzer and flocks of sausages flying through the air, form a pair of comedy characters most humorous.

WM. FARNUM IN "SAMSON."

One of the great big productions of the season, the six reel drama, "Samson," will be produced at the Soisson Theatre tomorrow. The distinguished actor, William Farnum, plays the leading role. It is not a biblical play. Marie Wickamp and Sherman Bainbridge appear in the two reel Bison drama, "The Oakhawn Handicap." The Joker comedy, "Love, Fireworks and the Janitor," is another scream, and the usual attractive features are in "The Animated Weekly."

The Colonial

MARGUERITE CLARK.

Petite Marguerite Clark is at the Colonial today and tomorrow in a picturization of Harold McGrath's popular novel "The Goose Girl," Miss Clark has appeared in but four Paramount pictures so far—"Wildflower," "The Crucible," both of which have been seen here, "The Goose Girl," the present attraction, and "Gretna Green" which comes in the near future. In all of these her acting is superb, but those who have seen all of them claim that "The Goose Girl" is the best.

On Saturday, Manager Kerby will present "After Five" a screaming comedy with Edward Abeles in the star role, and next Tuesday, the always popular Mary Pickford comes in "Mistress Nell."

"High Jinks," advertised as the season's biggest and best musical comedy, plays the Colonial Wednesday, April 28.

DAWSON.

DAWSON, April 20.—Mrs. Lydia Cochran, known to all as the Mother of Dawson; John Hagerty, an old war veteran, and Mrs. Solomon Davis, are on the sick list this week.

The West Penn Electric Company has a gang of men at work stringing wires and erecting new poles for the new street lights which are to be installed. The new system of lights will make Dawson one of the best lighted towns in the county. It is expected that the new system will be in operation by May 1.

A consignment of ring necked pheasants, imported from England, arrived here Saturday. Dr. J. F. Cogan, along with other members of the Wild Life League, turned them loose Monday in Boyds' woods just north of town. It is the intention of the league to protect them for the next two years. The pheasants liberated consisted of one cock and three hens. It is the request of the league that all parties give them aid in helping protect these birds and see that they are not harmed.

The houses occupied by A. A. Arbson, Mrs. John Fox and Mrs. Mary Cochran are being beautified with a new coat of paint.

The rumor of a few months ago that Dawson was to have a new Baltimore & Ohio station seems to be without foundation. The station at Dawson is an old land mark that Dawson people would like to see go.

Mrs. William Niewonger, Dawson, and Mrs. John Landymore, of East Liberty, have been chosen delegates to represent the Woman's Work Society of the Dawson Presbyterian Church at a reunion of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, to be held at Mount Pleasant on May 4, 5 and 6.

A home talent play, "The Village School Ma'am," is to be given in the Dawson Opera House on Thursday evening, April 22. The proceeds for the benefit of the Dawson schools.

Miss Marie Gorham has returned home, after spending a few days with friends in Pittsburg.

Joseph Forsythe of Pittsburg, was calling on friends and relatives here over Sunday.

Miss Edith Gallacher of Connellsville, spent Sunday with relatives in Lower Tyrone township.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bixler of Star Junction, were calling on relatives here over Sunday.

SUFFERED 15 YEARS, CURED IN 21 DAYS

Astounding Cures Made by this Remarkable New Discovery.

MONEY FOR ROADS

Automobile License Fees Assured by Supreme Court Decision.

HARRISBURG, April 20.—The decision of the Supreme Court in upholding the Dauphin county court in ruling that State Treasurer R. K. Young and Auditor General A. W. Powell must pay to the Highway Department the revenue derived from automobile licenses, places the department in possession of funds to continue repairs of highways without interruption, such as occurred last year.

The local officials have been paying the money since the Dauphin county court gave its decision with reservations in event of final action. The effect of the decision is to remove any doubts.

Thus far the Highway Department has drawn $275,000 from the motor license revenues for 1915, according to statements at the auditor general's department and approximately $850,000 remains to be used this year.

The repair work is progressing in every county and yesterday inspections were begun by Chief Engineer W. D. Uhler who started for Pittsburg by way of the southern road.

VANDERBILT.

VANDERBILT, April 20.—Mrs. C. V. Myers is spending a few days with her parents in McKeesport.

Charles Dunlap spent Sunday visiting his wife, who is a patient at the Mercy Hospital, Pittsburg. Mrs. Dunlap is improving.

Charles Steck of Connellsville was a business caller here yesterday.

Mrs. H. D. Shallenberger, Mrs. Joel Evans, Alva Reed and W. A. Cosgrove were Connellsville visitors on Monday.

Mrs. George Kuhn, Jr., and son visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Maust of Dunbar township Sunday.

Von der Goltz Promoted.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 19.—Field Marshal von der Goltz has been appointed commander-in-chief of the First Turkish army. He recently returned to Constantinople from a trip to Berlin, the object of which is reported to have been to urge the Germans to send an army to attack Serbia.

PENROD

Copyright, 1914, by Doubleday, Page & Company

Verlaine's hair was thick and the bright glints in it were beautiful, but Penrod was very tired of it. A tiny knot of green ribbon finished off the braid and kept it from unraveling and beneath the ribbon there was a final wisp of hair which was just long enough to repose upon Penrod's desk when Verlaine leaned back in her seat. It was there now. Thoughtfully he took the braid between thumb and forefinger and without disturbing Verlaine dipped the end of it and the green ribbon into the inkwell of his desk. It brought hale and ribbon forth dripping purple ink and partially dried them on a blotter, though, a moment later when Verlaine leaned forward they were still able to add a few picturesque touches to the plaid waist.

Rudolph Krauss, across the aisle from Penrod, watched the operation with protuberant eyes fascinated. Inspired to imitation he took a piece of chalk from his pocket and wrote "Hits a cross the shoulder blades of the boy in front of him then looked across appealingly to Penrod for tokens of congratulation. Penrod yawned.

Half the members of the class passed out to a recitation room the compurgated Verlaine among them, and Miss Spence started the remaining half through the ordeal of trial by mathematics. Several boys and girls were sent to the blackboard and Penrod stared for the moment followed their operations a little while with his eyes but not with his mind then sinking deeper in his seat, limply abandoned the effort. His eyes remained open but saw nothing. The routine of the arithmetic lesson reached his ears in familiar meaningless sounds but he heard nothing and yet this time, he was profoundly occupied. He had drifted away from the painful land of facts and floated now in a new sea of fancy, which he had just discovered.

Maturity forgets the marvelous richness of a boy's day dreams how colorful they glow, how rosy and living and how opaque the curtain closing down between the dreamer and the actual world. That curtain is almost sound proof too and causes more throat troubles among parents than is suspected.

The nervous monotony of the schoolroom inspires a sometimes unbearable longing for something astonishing to happen and as every boy's fundamental desire is to do something astonishing enough to himself so as to be the center of all human interest and awe it was natural that Penrod should discover in fancy hours of delightful relief of self habitation. He found in this curious series of invasions during the lesson in arithmetic that the atmosphere may be navigated by a swimmer under water but with infinitely greater ease and with perfect comfort in breathing. In his mind he extended his arms gracefully, at a level with his shoulders and dell at it paddled the air with his hands which at once caused him to be drawn up out of his seat and elevated gently to a position about midway between the floor and the ceiling, where he came to an equilibrium and floated, a sensation not the least exquisite because of the scorn of his fellow pupils appalled by the miracle. Miss Spence herself was amazed and frightened but he only smiled down carelessly upon her when she commanded him to return to earth, and then when she leaned upon a desk to pull him down he quietly paddled himself a little higher leaving his feet just out of her reach. Next he swam through a few slow somersaults to show his mastery of the new art and with the shouting of the dumfounded scholars ringing in his ears turned on his side and floated swiftly out of the window, immediately rising above the housetops, while people in the street below him shrieked, and a trolley car stopped dead in wonder.

With almost no exertion he paddled himself, many yards at a stroke, to the girls' private school where Marjorie Jones of the amber curls and the golden voice' long before the "Pageant of the Table Round" she had offered Penrod a hundred proofs that she considered him wholly undesirable and ineligible. At the Friday afternoon dancing class she consistently limited and led the latter at him whenever Professor Burtt singled him out for admonition in matters of feet and deportment. And but yesterday she had chided him for his slavish lack of memory in daring to offer her greeting on the way to Sunday school. "Well I expect you must forget I told you never to speak to me again. If I was a boy I'd be too proud to come hanging around people that don't speak to me, even if I was the worst boy in town!" So she flouted him. Then as he floated in through the window of her classroom and swam gently along the ceiling like an escaped toy balloon she fell upon her knees beside her little desk and lifting up her arms toward him cried with love and admiration

Oh, Penrod!"

He negligently kicked a globe from the high chandelier and, smiling coldly floated out through the hall to the front steps of the school, while Marjorie followed, imploring him to grant her one kind look.

In the street an enormous crowd had gathered headed by Miss Spence and a brass band, and a cheer from a hundred thousand throats shook the very ground as Penrod swam overhead. Marjorie knelt upon the steps and watched adoringly while Penrod took the drum major's baton and performing sinuous evolutions above the crowd, led the band. Then he threw the baton so high that it disappeared from sight. But he went swiftly after it a double delight, for he had not only the delicious sensation of rocketing safely up and up into the blue sky but also that of standing in the crowd below, watching and admiring himself as he dwindled to a speck, disappeared and then, emerging from a cloud, came speeding down, with the baton in his hand, to the level of the treetops, where he bent time for the band and the vast throng and Marjorie Jones who all united in the "Star Spangled Banner" in honor of his aerial achievements. It was a great moment.

It was a great moment, but something seemed to threaten it. The face of Miss Spence looking up from the crowd grew too vivid—unpleasantly vivid. She was beckoning him and shouting "Come down Penrod Schofield! Penrod Schofield come down here!" He could hear her above the band and the singing of the multitude. She seemed intent on spoiling everything. Marjorie Jones was weeping to show how sorry she was that she had formerly slighted him and throwing kisses to prove that she loved him, but Miss Spence kept jumping between him and Marjorie, incessantly calling his name.

He grew more and more irritated with her. He was the most important person in the world and was engaged in proving it to Marjorie Jones and the whole city, and yet Miss Spence seemed to feel she still had the right to order him about as she did in the old days when he was an ordinary school boy. He was furious. He was sure she wanted him to do something disagreeable. It seemed to him that she had screamed "Penrod Schofield!" thousands of times.

"Penrod Schofield! Penrod Schofield, come down here!"

From the beginning of his aerial experiments in his own schoolroom he had not opened his lips knowing somehow that one of the requirements for air floating is perfect silence on the part of the floater, but, finally, irritated beyond measure by Miss Spence's continuous insistence he was unable to restrain an indignant rebuke and immediately came to earth with a frightful bump.

Miss Spence—in the flesh—had directed toward the physical body of the absent Penrod an inquiry as to the functional consequences of dividing seven by apples fairly among three boys, and she was surprised and displeased to receive no answer although to the best of her knowledge and belief he was looking fixedly at her. She repeated her question crisply without visible effect then summoned him by name with increasing asperity. Twice she called him while all his fellow pupils turned to stare at the gazing boy. She advanced a step from the platform.

"Penrod Schofield!"

"Oh my goodness" he shouted suddenly. "Can't you keep still a minute?"

CHAPTER VI.

Uncle John.

MISS SPENCE gasped. So did the pupils. The whole room filled with a swelling conglomerate O-o-o-h.

As for Penrod himself, the walls reeled with the shock. He sat with his mouth open a mere lump of stupefaction. For the appalling words that he had hurled at the teacher were as inexplicable to him as to any other who heard them.

Nothing is more treacherous than the human mind, nothing else so loves to play the harlot. Even when patiently bullied into a semblance of order and training it may prove but a base and shifty servant. And Penrod's mind was not his servant. It was a master with the April winds' whims, and it had just played him a diabolical trick. The very jolt with which he came back to the schoolroom in the midst of his fancied flight jarred his day dream utterly out of him and he sat open mouthed in horror at what he had said.

The unanimous gasp of awe was protracted. Miss Spence however finally recovered her breath and returning deliberately to the platform faced the school. And then for a little while as pathetic stories sometimes recount everything was very still. It was so still in fact that Penrod's newborn notoriety could almost be heard growing. This grisly silence was at last broken by the teacher.

"Penrod Schofield stand up."

The miserable child obeyed.

"What did you mean by speaking to me in that way?"

He hung his head, raked the floor with the side of his shoe swayed, swallowed, looked suddenly at his hands with the air of never having seen them before then clasped them behind him. The school shivered in ecstatic horror every fascinated eye upon him yet there was not a soul in the room but was profoundly grateful to him for the sensation in finding the offended teacher herself. Unhappily all this gratitude was unconscious and altogether different from the kind which results in testimonials and loving cups. On the contrary

"Penrod Schofield!"

He gulped.

"Answer me at once! Why did you speak to me like that?"

"I was—" He choked, unable to continue.

"Speak out!"

"I was just—thinking," he managed to stammer.

"That will not do," she returned sharply. "I wish to know immediately why you spoke as you did."

The stricken Penrod answered helplessly.

"Because I was just thinking."

Upon the very rack he could have offered no simpler truthful explanation. It was all he knew about it.

"Thinking what?"

"Just thinking."

Miss Spence's expression gave evidence that her power of self restraint was undergoing a remarkable test. However, after calling counsel with herself, she commanded.

"Come here."

He shuffled forward and she placed a chair upon the platform near her own.

"Sit there!"

Then (but not at all as if nothing had happened) she continued the lesson in arithmetic. Spiritually the children may have learned a lesson in very small fractions indeed as they gazed at the fragment of sin before them on the stool of penitence. They all stared at him attentively, with hard and passionately interested eyes in which there was never one trace of pity. It cannot be said with precision that he writhed. His movement was more a slow continuous squirm effected with a ghastly assumption of languid indifference while his gaze in the effort to escape the merciless hearts gave of his schoolmates affixed itself with apparent permanence to the waistcoat button of James Russell Lowell just above the "u" in "Russell."

Classes came and classes went grilling him with eyes. Newcomers received the story of the crime in darkling whispers and the outcast sat and squirmed and squirmed and squirmed. (He did one or two things with his spine which a professional contortionist would have observed with real interest.) And all this while of freezing suspense was but the criminal's detention awaiting trial. A known punishment may be anticipated with some measure of equanimity—at least the prisoner may prepare himself to undergo it—but the unknown looms more monstrous for every attempt to guess it. Penrod's crime was unique. There were no rules to aid him in estimating the vengeance to fall upon him for it. What seemed most probable was that he would be expelled from the school in the presence of his family the mayor and council and whipped afterward by his father upon the state house steps, with the entire city an audience by invitation of the authorities.

Noon came. The rows of children filed out every head turning for a last unpleasingly speculative look at the outlaw. Then Miss Spence closed the door into the cloakroom and that into the big hall and came and sat at her desk near Penrod. The tramping of feet outside the shrill calls and shouting and the changing voices of the older boys ceased to be heard and there was silence. Penrod still affecting to be occupied with Lowell was conscious that Miss Spence looked at him intently.

"Penrod" she said gravely "what excuse have you to offer before I report your case to the principal?"

The word principal struck him to the vitals. Grand inquisitor, grand khan sultan emperor czar Caesar Augustus these are comparable. He stopped squirming instantly and sat rigid.

"I want an answer. Why did you shout those words at me?"

"Well" he murmured "I was just—thinking."

"Thinking what?" she asked sharply.

"I don't know."

"That won't do."

He took his left ankle in his right hand and regarded it helplessly.

"That won't do Penrod Schofield" she repeated severely. "If that is all the excuse you have to offer I shall report your case this instant."

And she rose with fatal intent.

But Penrod was one of those whom the prospect inspires. "Well, I have got an excuse."

"Well—she paused impatiently—what is it?"

He had not an idea, but he felt one coming and replied automatically in a plaintive tone.

"I guess anybody that had been through what I had to go through last night would think they had an excuse."

Miss Spence resumed her seat though with the air of being ready to leap from it instantly.

"What has last night to do with your insolence to me this morning?"

"Well I guess you'd see," he returned emphasizing the plaintive note "if you knew what I know."

"Now, Penrod" she said, in a kinder voice "I have a high regard for your mother and father and it would hurt me to distress them but you must either tell me what was the matter with you or I'll have to take you to Mrs Houston."

"Will that I going to?" he cried, spurred by the dread name. "It's because I didn't sleep last night."

"Were you ill?" The question was put with some dryness.

He felt the dryness. "No m I wasn't."

"Then if some one in your family was so ill that even you were kept up all night how does it happen they let you come to school this morning?"

"It wasn't illness" he returned shaking his head mournfully. "It was lots worse n anybody's being sick. It was—it was—well, it was jest awful."

"What was?" He marked with suspicion the incredulity in her tone.

"I was about Aunt Clara" he said.

"Your Aunt Clara?" she repeated. "Do you mean your mother's sister who married Mr Farry of Dayton, Ill?"

"Yes—Uncle John" returned Penrod sorrowfully. "The trouble was about him."

Miss Spence frowned a frown which he rightly interpreted as one of continued suspicion. "She and I were in school together" she said. "I used to know her very well, and I've always heard her married life was entirely happy. I don't—"

"Yes it was, he interrupted until last year when Uncle John took to running with traveling men—"

"What"

"Yes m." He nodded solemnly. "That was what started it. At first he was a good, kind husband but these traveling men would come him into a saloon on his way from work and they got him to drinking beer and then wines, wines liquors and cigars—"

"Penrod."

"Ma'am?"

"I'm not inquiring into your Aunt Clara's private affairs. I'm asking you if you have anything to say which would palliate—"

"That's what I'm tryin' to tell you about, Miss Spence" he pleaded. "If you'd jest only let me. When Aunt Clara and her little baby daughter got to our house last night—"

"You say Mrs. Farry is visiting your mother?"

"Yes m—not just visiting—you see she had to come. Well of course, the baby Clara she was so bruised up and mauled where he'd been hittin' her with his cane—"

"You mean that your uncle had done such a thing as that" exclaimed Miss Spence, suddenly disarmed by this scandal.

"Yes m. And mamma and Margaret had to sit up all night nursin' little Clara. And Aunt Clara was in such a state somebody had to keep talkin' to her and there wasn't anybody but me to do it. So I—"

"But where was your father?" she cried.

"Ma'am?"

"Where was your father while—"

"Oh papa?" Penrod paused reflected then brightened. "Why he was down at the train waitin' to see if Uncle John would try to follow on and make some more home so he could persecute 'em some more. I wanted to do that but they said I didn't come I mightn't be strong enough to hold him, and—" The brave lad paused again modestly. Miss Spence's expression was encouraging. Her eyes were wide with astonishment and there may have been in them also the mingled beginnings of admiration and self reproach. Penrod warming to his work felt safer every moment.

"And so" he continued "I had to sit up with Aunt Clara. She had some pretty big bruises too and I had to—"

"But why didn't they send for a doctor?" However this question only ticked of dying in reality.

"Oh they didn't want any doctor" each finished the inspired realist promptly. "They don't want anybody to know about it because Uncle John is such a form and then where I'd be if everybody knew he'd been a drunkard and all whipped his wife and little baby daughter."

"Oh" said Miss Spence.

"You see he used to be upright as anybody" he went on explanatively "it all began—"

"Began Penrod?"

"Yes m. It all commenced from the first day he let those traveling men coax him into the saloon. Penrod narrated the downfall of his Uncle John at length. In detail he was nothing short of plethoric and incident followed incident sketched with such vividness such abundance of color and such verisimilitude to a drunkard's life as a drunkard's life should be that had Miss Spence possessed the rather chilling attributes of William J. Burns himself the last trace of skepticism must have vanished from her mind. Besides there are two things that will be believed of any man whatsoever and one of them is that he has been to drink. And in every sense it was a moving picture which with simple but eloquent words the virtuous Penrod set before his teacher.

His eloquence factors I with what it fed on and so with the eloquence so with self reproach in the gentle bosom of the teacher. She cleared her throat with difficulty once or twice during his description of his ministering night with Aunt Clara. "And I said to her Why Aunt Clara what's the use of talkin on so about it. And I said Now Aunt Clara all the crying in the world won't make things any better. And then she'd just keep ketchin hold of me and sob and kind of holler and I'd say Don't cry Aunt Clara I know don't cry."

Then under the influence of some fragmentary survivals of the respectable portion of his Sunday adventures his theme became more exalted and only partially misquoting a phrase from a psalm he related how he had tried it for comfort to Aunt Clara and how he had besought her to seek higher guidance in her trouble.

The surprising thing about a structure such as Penrod was erecting is that the taller it becomes the more ornamentation it will stand. Gifted boys have this faculty of building magnificence upon cobwebs and Penrod was gifted. Under the spell of his really great performance Miss Spence gazed more and more sweetly upon the prodigy of spiritual beauty and goodness before her, until at last when Penrod came to the explanation of his "just thinking" she was forced to turn her head away.

"You mean" she said gently "that you were all worn out and hardly knew what you were saying."

"Yes m."

"And you were thinking about all those dreadful things to hard that you forgot where you were?"

"I was thinking" he said simply, "how to save Uncle John."

And the end of it for this mighty boy was that the teacher kissed him.

CHAPTER VII

Fidelity of a Little Dog

THE returning students that afternoon observed that Penrod's desk was vacant and nothing could have been more impressive than that sinister mere emptiness. The accepted theory was that Penrod had been arrested. How breathtaking then the sensation when at the beginning of the second hour he strolled in with inimitable carelessness and rubbing his eyes, somewhat noticeably in the manner of one who has snatched an hour of much needed sleep took his place as if nothing in particular had happened. This at first supposed to be a superhuman exhibition of sheer audacity became but the more dumfounding when Miss Spence looking from her desk, greeted him with a pleasant little nod. Even after school Penrod gave numerous maddened investigators no relief. All he would consent to say was

"Oh I just talked to her."

A mystification not entirely unconnected with the one thus produced was manifested at his own family dinner table the following evening. Aunt Clara had been out rather late and came to the table after the rest were seated. She wore a puzzled expression.

"Do you ever see Mary Spence now nowadays?" she inquired as she unfolded her napkin addressing Mr Schofield. Penrod abruptly set down his soup spoon and gazed at his aunt with fluttering attention.

"Yes sometimes" said Mrs Schofield. "She's Penrod's teacher."

"She?" said Mrs Farry. "Do you—" She paused. "Do people think her little—queer these days?"

"Why no" returned her sister. "What makes you say that?"

"Why he acquitted a very odd manner" said Mrs Farry decidedly. "At first she seemed odd to me. I met him at the corner just before I got to the house a few minutes ago and after we had said howdy do to each other he kept hold of my hand and kept on as much she was going to cry. She seemed to be trying to say something and sliding—

"But I don't think that's so very queer Clara. She knew you in school didn't she."

"Yes but—"

"And he hasn't seen you for many years I think it's perfectly natural she—"

"Well" She stood there squeezing my hand and struggling to get her voice and then finally she said in a little fearful whisper. "Be of good cheer it will pass."

"Do quiet" exclaimed Margaret and sighed and returned once heavily to his soup.

"I don't know" said Mr Schofield mildly. "Of course I'm not in the outlook business but the outlook seems to me—"

"Since they" [illegible] "she knows [illegible]"

"I'm [illegible] it seems [illegible] suggested Mr [illegible] time."

"What [illegible]"

"[illegible] said that [illegible] even queerer and then put her handkerchief to her eyes and hurried away.

Penrod laid down his spoon again and moved his chair slightly back from the table. A spirit of prophecy was upon him. He knew that some one was going to ask a question which he felt might better remain unspoken.

"What was the other thing she said?" Mr Schofield inquired thus immediately fulfilling his son's premonition.

"She said returned Mrs Farry slowly, looking about the table "she said 'I know that Penrod is a great, great comfort to you.'"

There was a general exclamation of surprise. It was a singular thing and in no manner may it be considered complimentary to Penrod that this speech of Miss Spence's should have immediately confirmed Mrs Farry's doubts about her in the minds of all his family.

Mr Schofield shook his head pityingly.

"I'm afraid she's a goner," he went so far as to say.

"Of all the weird ideas!" cried Margaret.

"I never heard anything like it in my life" Mrs Schofield exclaimed. "Was that all she said?"

"Every word."

Penrod again resumed attention to his soup. His mother looked at him curiously, and then struck by a sud-

"Wait! She stood there squeezing my hand and struggling to get her voice den thought, gathered the glances of the adults of the table by a significant movement of the head and by another conveyed a admonition to drop the subject until later. Miss Spence was Penrod's teacher. It was better, for many reasons not to discuss the subject of her queerness before him. This was Mrs Schofield's thought at the time. Later she had another, and it kept her awake.

The next afternoon Mr Schofield, returning at 5 o'clock from the cares of the day found the house deserted and sat down to read his evening paper in what proved to be an uninhabited apartment known to its own world as the drawing room. A sweet voice [illegible] to him and the boy [illegible] him of the presence of another person.

"Who are you Penrod" the [illegible] asked politely.

"Here" said Penrod [illegible]

Stupid Mr Schofield's eyes [illegible] his [illegible] at the piano [illegible] window his wife still [illegible] him [illegible]

"What are you doing there?"

"Why under the piano."

"Well" the boy returned with grave sweetness. "I was just kind of sitting in here thinking."

"All right" Mr Schofield rather touched returned to the digestion of a murder his back once more to the piano and Penrod silently drew from beneath his jacket where he had slipped it simultaneously with the sweet paper backed volume entitled "Slim Jim, the Sioux City Squealer or, Not Guilty Your Honor."

In this manner the reading club continued in peace absorbed contented the world well forgot—until a sudden violently irritated slam bang of the front door startled the members, and Mrs Schofield burst into the room and threw herself into a chair moaning.

"What's the matter mamma" asked her husband laying aside his paper.

"Henry Pasdale Schofield" returned the lady. "I don't know what is to be done with that boy. I do not."

"I mean Penrod?"

"Who else could I mean?" She sat up exasperated to stare at him. "Henry Pasdale Schofield you've got to take this matter in your hands. It's beyond me!"

"Well what has he—"

"Last night I got to thinking" she began rapidly "about what Clara told us—think between she and Margaret and little Clara I have gone to ten at Cousin Charlotte's—but they'll be home soon—about what she said about Miss Spence."

"You mean about Penrod's being a comfort?"

"Yes and I kept thinking and thinking and thinking about it till I couldn't stand it any—"

"By George!" shouted Mr Schofield startlingly, stooping to look under the piano. A statement that he had suddenly remembered his son's presence would be lacking in accuracy, for the highly sensitized Penrod was, in fact, no longer present. No more was Duke, his faithful dog.

"What's the matter?"

"Nothing" he returned striding to the open window and looking out. "Go on."

"Oh!" she moaned. "It must be kept from Clara. And I'll never hold up my head again if John Farry ever hears of it."

"Hears of what?"

"Well, I just couldn't stand it. I got so curious. And I thought, of course if Miss Spence had become a little unbalanced it was my duty to know it as Penrod's mother and she his teacher. So I thought I would just call on her at her apartment after school and have a chat and see. And I did and—oh—"

"Well?"

"I've just come from there, and she told me—she told me! Oh, I've never known anything like this!"

"What did she tell you?"

Mrs Schofield, making a great effort, managed to assume a temporary appearance of calm. "Henry," she said solemnly, "hear this in mind whatever you do to Penrod it must be done in some place where Clara won't hear it. But the first thing to do is to find him."

With in view of the window from which Mr Schofield was gazing was the closed door of the storeroom in the stable and just outside this door Duke was performing a most engaging trick. His young master had taught Duke to "sit up and beg" when he wanted anything and if that didn't get it to "speak." Duke was feeling the closed door and sitting up and begging and now he also spoke—in a loud [illegible] bark.

There was an [illegible] door, and from this [illegible] with old paint.

What will be the best boxing show ever pulled off here is scheduled for April 27 before the Connellsville Athletic Club, when a double wind-up will be put on. Patsy Brannigan of New Castle and Jimmy Coy of Pittsburg, two of the best featherweights in the business, will clash. Brannigan is known here as a dandy and McCoy comes well advertised as one of the fastest featherweights in the ring and a hard hitter as well.

Then the popular Fay Kaiser, who bids fair to be a contender for the middleweight championship some day, will meet Bill Feg of Uniontown, formerly of Philadelphia, where he fought many good ones.

Both these bouts are headliners and no Pittsburg club ever put on any better bows. Promoter Jack Stevens is plunging a lot of money to give Connellsville good boxing and he expects to get returns from this show. Otherwise he says, it is his last show.

Jimmy Powell, a 115 pound boy from Wheeler, will be pitted against some other fast lad of his weight, probably a Braddock boxer.

REJECTED; INDIAN KILLS GIRL

Postmistress Is Shot While Riding With Favorite Sailor.

By Associated Press.

SHAWANO, Wis., April 20.—Miss Mary Dickson, postmistress at Keshena, official agency of the Menominee Indian reservation, was shot and instantly killed late last night by an Indian, James Waponse, a rejected suitor. Waponse then fired two shots into his head. He was taken to the government hospital where it is said chances for his recovery are slight.

The shooting occurred while Miss Dickson was buggy-riding with another young man. Waponse lay in hiding by the side of the road. Waponse demanded the girl go with him. Upon her refusal Waponse fired. Miss Dickson's companion fled.

RESCUED FROM YACHT.

Fourteen Passengers and Crew of Three Saved from the Gulf.

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 20.—Fourteen passengers and the crew of three of the steam yacht Dolphin were rescued in the gulf yesterday by the steam yacht Gypsy as the Dolphin was settling rapidly. The Dolphin, bound for Aransas Pass, sprung a leak several hours from port and began to settle.

Passengers and crew climbed to the top of the cabin and superstructure, finally attracting the Gypsy's attention. She came alongside, transferred the passengers and towed the Dolphin to port.

CHARGE ELECTION FRAUD.

Charleston Democrats Alleged to Have Purchased Votes.

By Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 20.—B. B. Wood, postmaster, and R. M. Brawley, chief of police, both Democrats, together with eight others of that party and 10 Republicans, have been arrested so far today in connection with the municipal election.

Each was charged with violation of the election laws by buying votes and was held for a hearing in $500 bail.

"GETS-IT" a Sure Shot for All Corns

Use Two Drops—and They Vanish.

"Murder! Everybody Tries to Step on My Corn!" Use "GETS-IT" and You'll Have No Corns to Be Stepped On.

When corns make you almost die with your boots on, when you try to walk on the edge of your shoes to try to get away from your corns you're way behind time if you have not used "GETS-IT." It's the corn cure of the century. The new way, the sure, painless simple way. It makes a fellow really feel foolish after he used cutting salves, corn-biting ointments, toe-binding bandages, blood-bringing razors, knives and scissors, jabbers and whatnots, when he uses just 2 drops of "GETS-IT" and sees his corn vanish. The difference is divine. Just try it. You won't wince when you put on your shoe. In the morning "GETS-IT" is sure, "gets" any corn, callus, wart or bunion.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Connellsville and I recommended as the world's only real corn cure by A. N. Clarke, Laughrey Drug Co., Fred H. Harmening and J. C. Moore.—Adv.

TENNIS WILL BE POPULAR IN COUNTY THIS SEASON

Local Club Will Open Its Courts this Week and Play Will Commence Soon in Other Towns.

From indications tennis will attain a wider popularity in Connellsville this season than ever before. Hitherto the game has never been taken up until late in May but play will begin this week on the East Park courts, work on which has been going on for about a week. This is the only organized tennis club in the city, but there are likely to be several others before the season gets well under way. J. H. Henderson is president; Eugene Bishop, secretary, and C. F. Hirst, treasurer. The membership is limited to 20. The courts, located in the East Park addition, are good ones and with proper attention, such as will be given this season, will become faster.

The Keagy court, on the South Side, will be put in shape soon. This is very popular during the summer months, there being scarcely an hour during the day that it is not occupied.

In addition to these courts, movements are on foot to construct courts in other sections of town. The young men of the Lutheran Church are considering several sites on the South Side on which to construct courts, much of the work will be done by the men and boys themselves.

West Side residents are also discussing a plan to build a court on one of the vacant plots over there.

Reports from Scottdale indicate that tennis will be very popular there as well. The Mill town has developed some fine players and there is possibility of tournaments between them and Connellsville players. Matches with Perryopolis have already been discussed.

DI-VA-DA LEAGUE ORGANIZES

Big Season Is Expected; Games to be Played at Dickerson Run.

The Di-Va-Da baseball league, composed of Dickerson Run, Vanderbilt, Dawson, Y. M. C. A. teams will be in the field again this year, an organization having been effected at a recent meeting. The teams will be considerably stronger than last year.

The managers have been busy the last few days signing contracts with their players. All games will be played on the old Y. M. C. A. grounds at Dickerson Run. The schedule will begin about May 15. Opening day will be marked by a big parade of all four teams in uniform, headed by a brass band.

The managers of the teams are: Vanderbilt, J. W. Mulligan, Dawson, Allen Strouse, Y. M. C. A., Roy Devers and Independents, John Landymore.

WANTED WAGES CUT.

Steel Stockholders Opposed Passing Quarterly Dividend.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, it became known today, in voting at their last quarterly meeting in January to pass the dividend on the common stock did so in the face of opposition on the part of many stockholders who thought the dividend should be declared even if the corporation had to reduce wages to its great army of employes to obtain the money for the dividends.

Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the corporation, divulged this situation at the annual stockholders' meeting in Hoboken today.
